
What does Dunkirk represent? It is a story of the triumph of the human spirit. We all go through periods where we suffer losses one after another, but adversity teaches us. When faced with conditions that would break most people, the British Army soldiers at Dunkirk had found within themselves an endless reservoir of self-belief and fortitude. The result was an extraordinary turning point in history, which paved way for ultimate victory. Dunkirk has entertained millions of people around the globe. With Dunkirk 2017, director Christopher Nolan has taken the helm for this epic. The setting is in the eponymous small fishing port of Dunkirk, France, which was harbouring 1,400 British soldiers at the beginning of Operation Dynamo. The evacuation would take place on the beaches opposite to this beach resort town. This is where Nolan's 1st war movie will start as it ends with a bang as British and French soldiers unite with Polish and Free French soldiers to fight with them against Nazi Germany soldiers led by Field Marshall Erwin Rommel. The story would start in Dunkirk at the height of World War II in June 1940. A group of British soldiers executed a daring plan to evacuate troops from a beach, in a desperate effort to prevent encirclement and capture by German forces during the Battle of Dunkirk. After the evacuation is complete, some soldiers are able to safely sail back to England where they partake in determined fighting against Nazi Germany forces. Nearly 5,000 French citizens would also join them along with civilians who came together on boats and barges. The movie started after the evacuation was completed on May 28th but it did not stop there as some soldiers paid with their lives for their steadfastness and courage at the time of Dunkirk. A highly collaborative effort, with Chris Nolan at the helm, Christopher Nolan signed on historical advisor and author, Laurence Rees to oversee research for the film. Nolan's main objective in making this movie is to create a representation of the battle that would be accurate in every possible way possible. The movie would feature front-line military hardware like planes and tanks in addition to CGI-created visuals of both ships and boats. Christopher Nolan also kept an open mind which he demonstrated by basing their major evacuation ship on a real prototype boat at Doxford Yard in Sunderland. He did not neglect small details that could impact how realistic it would look either through practical or visual effects. The shoreline set created for this movie was 300 meters long. It is important to note that Dunkirk is not a war film but a survival story. Nolan had stated that the movie is "about survival, persistence, and comradeship". The cinematography of this movie was handled by Hoyte van Hoytema with Hans Zimmer handling the musical score for Dunkirk . Hoytema has worked with Nolan on both "The Dark Knight Rises" and "Interstellar". For his task at Dunkirk, he got support from Carl Rinsch who helped him stand out from his previous works with Christopher Nolan for this movie.
